The Asian Baseline Essay Project

The concept of Baseline Essays was introduced by Dr. Asa Hilliard III, a consultant to the Portland Public School District, in 1982. The phrase baseline essays when used by the Portland Public School District means a series of essays that provides fundamental information about the history, culture and contributions to overall human heritage. For each geocultural group, a set of essays covers the subjects of:

- Art
- Language Arts
- Mathematics
- Music
- Science
- Social Studies

The set is meant to highlight the essence of any civilization. It also provides the reader with relevant and positive information, presented from that group’s worldview.

The inhabitants of the United States are divided into six geocultural groups:

- African-American
- American Indian
- Asian-American
- European-American
- Hispanic-American
- Pacific Islander-American

These divisions, with the exception of Hispanic-American, are based upon the land masses where humankind could be found approximately 5,000 years ago, in this instance. America is used as a synonym for United States. All residents of the United States are acknowledged as hyphenated Americans with the exception of American Indians, the first inhabitants of the Americas.

The Asian-American Essays are the fourth set in the series of Baseline Essays. These essays cover the early history of people who lived on the continent of Asia as well as the contemporary history of people in the United States whose antecedents originally came from Asia. The essays acknowledge the ethnic and cultural diversity that exists within the continent of Asia.

The primary audience for the Baseline Essays is the 3,000 plus elementary, middle, and high school teachers, administrators and support staff in Portland Public Schools. The essays are a resource and their content is to be infused, as appropriate, into all subjects from pre-kindergarten through twelfth grade.

In early 1993, the Asian/Asian-American Curriculum Committee was formed as an advisory committee to guide the development of the Asian-American Baseline Essays. The Committee consisted of scholars from the Asian community representing Afghani, Arabs, Burmese, Chinese, Indian, Iranian, Iraqi, Israeli, Japanese, Korean, Laotian, Lebanese, Palestinian, Syrian, and Vietnamese, among others.
The Asian/Asian-American Curriculum Committee faced numerous challenges in the early planning stages. The term Asian-American was problematic especially for recent immigrants to the United States. There was a concern that the term Asian-Americans would not reflect the ancient history of Asia and would mainly cover information about Asians in the United States. On the other hand, some of the committee members were concerned that the term Asian Baseline Essay would not reflect the history of Asian-Americans and further would separate Asian-Americans from other Americans. Thus, for the purpose of inclusion the term Asian/Asian-American was selected to be part of the title.

The next challenge concerned the definition of Asian/Asian-American, with regard to the geocultural division of the world. The definition of the term in dictionaries and encyclopedic references is to a people who themselves or their antecedents originate from the continent of Asia. However, it was recognized that this collective identifier may not be the term preferred when referring to a given cultural group or individual. Accordingly, people should be addressed by the terms they prefer.

Another barrier was addressing the controversial issues that exist between nations, cultures and ethnic groups on the continent of Asia. The discussion resulted in the following criteria:

- Each essay should cover the history, culture and contributions of different groups and regions of Asia.
- Each essay should contain information that is enlightening, uplifting and written in the voice of the people.
- The content of each essay should be broad enough to be inclusive of the diversity that exists within and between various ethnic populations of the Asian/Asian-American groups, while brief enough to generate the kind of interest that encourages the reader to do additional reading and research.

A national search by the Asian/Asian-American Curriculum Committee obtained a pool of consultants for each subject area. The continent of Asia was divided into regions of East, West, South, Southeast, North and Central Asia. For each essay a consultant from one region was selected. In addition four or five reviewers who represented other regions of Asia were selected to review each essay. A general Consultant, Dr. Shirley, Hune, was selected to oversee the project and review all six essays. A three draft process was designed for each essay, but in reality, each essay was reviewed many times by the contracted reviewers, the general consultant, the Asian/Asian-American Curriculum Committee members, community members and finally by Dr. Tracy Dillon, the editor for the Asian/Asian-American Baseline Essays.

It is important to acknowledge that throughout the Asian/Asian-American Baseline Essays North and Central Asia (refer to the map on page 13) have less information compared to other regions of Asia. Many factors have contributed to this matter. Primarily, most sources recommended to us have been written in the Russian language and are not available in English. Importing and translating the information is beyond the scope of the Baseline Essay Project.
There were several major obstacles during the development of the essays. Williams Lillys, the author of the Art Essay, passed away. Another national search was conducted. Dr. Pratapaditya Paul, SoKam Ng Lee and Christine Knoke included the visuals and completed the art essay. The wife of Professor Shawn Wong, the co-author of the Language Arts Essay, passed away. Dr. Arjun Gupta, the co-author of the science essay, had a major heart attack in the spring of 1999. However, through the dedication and hard work of the consultants and the reviewers these essays have been completed with the exception of the science essay. Although we will work toward the completion of the science essay we did not want to delay the project. So the Asian/Asian-American set was published without the science essay.

The Essays are written in a style and tone that make them reader-friendly without detracting from or minimizing the communication of major points, recurring themes and critical topics. The content, structure and organization of each essay is the responsibility of its author. However, the perspective in each essay is the result of a collaborative effort of the respective authors, the general consultant, reviewers and the Asian/Asian-American Curriculum Committee. In addition to the committee members, 76 consultants, reviewers and specialists, all experts in their fields, have worked on the essays. With confidence it can be stated that many diverse points of view from a variety of different cultures and ethnic groups have been represented. As with other Baseline Essays we do not claim to present a perfect document to satisfy every need. However, this is just a starting point for the Asian/Asian-American Baseline Essays. Future editions will incorporate the feedback that results from this first edition.

The consultants and reviewers for each essay are listed on the pages that follow.
