

BINDER CORE: INTRODUCTION & SYLLABUS 2011-2012

INTRODUCTION

Welcome to da Vinci Arts Middle School. My name is Patrick Binder and I will instruct your son/daughter in reading, writing, and history this academic year. I have taught in the Midwest, Alaska, Hawaii, and Portland. I am a highly energetic teacher with very lofty expectations, but I tend to walk on the sarcastic side of the fence. Rest assured, I am very professional and I care deeply about each student.

I do my absolute best to help each student realize his/her potential and I craft assignments, projects, and tests to challenge a student's faculties...not just rote memorization or busywork. I do hold the students accountable for their learning. This can come as quite a shock to students and parents, but it is a lesson I would rather have them learn sooner than later. It is their education and it is the only time in life that it will be free.

RESOURCES

NEWSLETTER

I create and send out a weekly newsletter. It contains a little blurb about each subject in Core (reading, writing, and history) and any general information or updates. The newsletter appears in both a paper and an electronic format, but in order to save trees and cost I only send a paper copy home to everyone the first week of school. There are copies of the newsletter available for students to take home on the "information" board in the classroom.

If you want to be added to the email list, send a note to my school email address listed below. Please include "da Vinci newsletter" in the subject line—I will also have a sign-up sheet for email addresses during "Back-to-School" on Wednesday, September 21st from 6-8pm.

The newsletter provides an excellent framework for knowing what is going on, expected, and due in Binder Core. It is only a newsletter. It will not do the work for you, nor will it provide in-depth and analytical treatises on the pedagogical underpinnings of Core assignments. It is merely written to provide a snapshot of what we will be doing. I cannot recreate 2.5 hours off classroom instruction each day (12.5 in one week) in a weekly newsletter.

UPDATES

All things change. I provide students with a fairly comprehensive trimester, monthly, and weekly schedule. That being said...please refer to the first line of this paragraph. I do my best to keep changes to a minimum. There are times, however, when assemblies, absences, time constraints, and a barrage of miniature gherkins forces me to change a due date, cancel an assignment, or alter the expectations. I inform students of these changes and I expect and hold students accountable for keeping an up-to-date and comprehensive planner.

WEB PAGE

I maintain a web site through Portland Public Schools' server. You can access my pages through da Vinci Arts Middle School's web page by:

1. Access da Vinci's web page:
<http://www.pps.k12.or.us/schools/davinci/>
2. choose "Staff" from the list on the left
3. click on my name "Binder, Patrick" from the pop-up menu window, or you can access my site directly through
<http://www.pps.k12.or.us/schools/davinci/257.htm>
4. explore as desired and needed.

I keep the website as simple and straightforward as possible. History assignments are located in the HISTORY page, reading assignments are on the READING page, etc. You can tell the subject (reading, writing, or history) by its location on the planner page—which row it is in. I am constantly adding to, revising, and deleting sections of the web site. The welcome page will inform you of the most recent updates.

The pages have downloadable versions of the weekly newsletters, vocabulary lists, assignment sheets, history chapters, links to current event sites, project related handouts, etc. Even if you/your student forgets something at school the web site provides a way of getting the work done. It takes away one more excuse.

GRADES

ONLINE GRADES

The district has purchased and mandated a new online program called "EdBox" to maintain grades. It is a web-based grading program that allows parents and students access to their grades. You can only access your (or your student's) grades and will not have knowledge or awareness of how anyone else is doing.

Parents and students will not have access to EdBox until October. As the time approaches and the wrinkles have been ironed out (at least to the size of small mountains) I will include instructions in a newsletter and on my web site. Right now I have no clue how it will work for ya'll.

I have found online grades an invaluable tool to help both students and parents track “submitted” versus “not handed in”, scores, and overall grade in each subject. Please keep in mind that it is only a tool. It is kept up-to-date, but if an assignment is submitted late it will take up to ten days for me to assess and update the online grade. I will at least mark the assignment as “submitted,” but please be patient.

DIFFERENTIATION

I provide a variety of levels within my lessons and present the material in diversity of ways. Students have different abilities and learn better through assorted means. It is complex way of saying that I tailor my assignments and expectations according to each student. A more rigorous vocabulary program might challenge a Talented and Gifted Student or a student who continues to struggle with reading comprehension could be paired with same-level readers for a discussion group.

It takes me a while to get to know the students who are new to me this year. Even with those students who I have taught for a year or two their needs, aptitudes, and motivation change. Please let me know if something is too hard, too easy, or just not working. The student does, however, need to make an honest effort at the task. I am not afraid of change—unless it sneaks up on me and says, “boo.”

I am demanding, but I have been doing this for almost twenty years in a dozen different schools. I am aware that I set the bar pretty high, but I am keenly aware that my expectations are not out of line with the abilities of students throughout the country. It does, however, necessitate communication between all three—student, parent(s), and teacher to get the job done. We are all integral parts.

LETTER GRADES

We will be following the traditional A-F scale. An “A” is 90-100%, a “B” will be 80-89%, a “C” will be 70-79%, and a “D” will be 60-69%. Anything below 60% will receive a failing mark (“F”).

Assignments, tests, and projects all have a determined point value. The points earned by your student are divided by the points possible to determine the percentage, and, thus, the grade. Keep in mind that I am a difficult evaluator and I do expect students to read and follow directions. A “B” is above average and a “C” is not a failing grade.

Rest assured that 6th graders are assessed at a different level (and often different point value) than 7th and 8th graders. The same goes for 7th and 8th graders. A student’s aptitudes and effort are also taken into consideration, but the expected mastery of skills and information is paramount. If the level seems too challenging, please communicate with me sooner than later to arrange alternatives. There are always alternatives available if arranged beforehand and not after the fact.

If your student is struggling with grades please do not wait to contact me. I would much rather get an early jump on helping a student than have their egos take repeated beatings.

EVERYTHING ELSE

NEW SCHEDULE

Da Vinci does have a new schedule. I will post the new schedule to my web site rather than confuse an already verbose welcome letter. The crucial element is that on Wednesdays and Thursdays we will be in a block schedule format.

On Wednesdays students will go to 2nd, 4th, and 6th period classes and they will also participate in a “Flex” class. Flex classes are organized by grade levels and the Flex teacher will be the same throughout the year. 8th graders will be with their Capstone teacher, 7th graders are with Core teachers (not necessarily their Core teacher, but a Core teacher), and 6th graders are with science and math teachers.

On Thursdays students will attend 1st, 3rd, 5th, and 7th period classes.

Mondays, Tuesdays, and Fridays will be a regular schedule with periods 1-7. If you can follow all of that... good luck.

FEEDBACK

Please email/contact me with questions, comments, or concerns regarding any issues. My contact information is always at the bottom of all correspondence I send home and on the main page of my web site. Do not hesitate to communicate. I would not provide my contact information if I did not want it used. I may not be able to answer right away, but at least the communication has started.

Additionally, people point out issues with the web site or information in the newsletters (which are only resolved because I am alerted to the situation). Your help is greatly appreciated. Please keep in mind that because of time constraints most of my communication (in written form) is a first draft and there will be mistakes. So, save it having a profound impact on the fate of the earth my grammatical errors do not need to be relayed to me.

I WANT YOU

FOR FEEDBACK!

COMMUNICATION?

There are almost sixty-five students between AM and PM Binder Cores. There is only one of me. I have a lot of experience, but I continue to learn how to be a better teacher every day. I do welcome and value your feedback, but keep in mind that you may not be getting the whole story from your child. Miscommunication happens—whether by a lack of all information or omission of certain details.

Please do contact me, but please communicate with me in a way that allows us to have a meaningful dialogue. I am often shocked by what “adults” think is appropriate communication with a teacher. I am more than happy to schedule face-to-face time with you or phone conversations to address and resolve any issue or dilemma. I do have to work around my wife’s work schedule for afternoon meetings, but I will do my best to talk with you in a timely manner.

PHILOSOPHY

6th, 7th, and 8th graders are entering that delicate time in life between handholding and independence. They want freedom, but not necessarily the responsibility that goes with it. Their minds are becoming aware of things beyond the “me”, but they struggle with the interactions and understanding of it all. They are energetic and still accepting of one another. Their brains and bodies are going through a radical change and the smallest thing can make them jubilant or break down in tears. I do not envy the parents of teenagers, but I also think it is the best age. It is a tough path to follow and there are no absolutes.

Each of us raises our children in the best way that we can, but our expectations and rules are not universal—with the exception of a few. I do, however, employ a few simple guidelines:

- treat others the way you want to be treated,
- try to solve the problem first...then use your resources,
- nice words, actions, & ways of speaking,
- you are responsible for you.

It seems to work pretty well with my children and it makes them think first. I do not coddle my children and I will not coddle yours. They are amazing individuals who are capable of brilliance. My job is to give them the tools and skills and then step out of their way as they dazzle the world.

I am a parent myself. All three of my children are now in school (a second grader, a first grader, and a preschooler). I treat my students how I would want my children treated. I provide them with boundaries, humor, guidelines, intense energy, a challenge, and an ear. Your children are important to me. Their academic, emotional, and social development is important to me. Like a parent, however, I will make mistakes. I do my best to learn from what has worked and what does not and I apply it to the next opportunity.

We have the best school with the best students and I am excited for another great year. Your presence is always welcome in my classroom and in our school.
